Types of Iowa State Graduation Cords

Iowa State University offers a variety of graduation cords to acknowledge students' achievements across academic, leadership, and service domains. Each cord color corresponds to a specific honor or organization, allowing graduation participants and attendees to recognize accomplishments at a glance.

Academic Honors Cords

Graduation cords awarded for academic excellence are among the most prestigious at Iowa State. These include cords for students graduating with honors such as cum laude, magna cum laude, and summa cum laude distinctions. The colors of these cords are standardized to represent the level of academic achievement.

Organizational and Leadership Cords

Students who have demonstrated leadership through participation in recognized student organizations, honor societies, or leadership programs may receive cords reflecting their involvement. These cords vary in color and signify commitment beyond academics, highlighting leadership, service, and engagement.

Special Recognition Cords

Additional cords may be awarded for areas such as community service, military service, or participation in diversity and inclusion initiatives. These cords recognize unique contributions and efforts made by students during their time at Iowa State University.

Eligibility and Criteria for Graduation Cords

Eligibility requirements for earning Iowa State graduation cords depend on the specific honor or organization represented by the cord. These criteria ensure that only qualifying students receive appropriate recognition at commencement.

Academic Honors Criteria

Students must meet GPA thresholds set by the university to qualify for academic honors cords. Typically, the criteria are:

- Cum Laude: GPA of 3.50 to 3.69
- Magna Cum Laude: GPA of 3.70 to 3.89
- Summa Cum Laude: GPA of 3.90 and above

These GPA ranges are subject to confirmation based on the university's current academic policies.

Organizational Membership Requirements

For cords representing student organizations or honor societies, students must be active members in good standing. Some organizations require completion of leadership roles, community service hours, or participation in specific programs during the academic year.

Special Recognition Qualifications

Special recognition cords may require verification of service, participation in military programs, or involvement in diversity initiatives. Documentation or recommendations may be necessary to validate eligibility for these cords.

Ordering and Distribution Process

The process for obtaining Iowa State graduation cords involves coordination between the university, academic departments, and student organizations. Understanding the ordering and distribution timeline is crucial for students planning to wear cords at graduation.

University-Provided Cords

Academic honors cords are typically provided by the university or the Registrar's office at no additional cost. Eligible students are notified in advance and can pick up their cords during designated times before the commencement ceremony.

Organization and Department Cords

Student organizations and academic departments responsible for leadership or special recognition cords generally manage their own ordering process. Students should confirm deadlines and payment requirements with their respective organizations to ensure timely receipt of cords.

Important Deadlines and Procedures

Adhering to deadlines is essential. Students should:

- Confirm eligibility and application status early in the semester of graduation
- Submit any required forms or fees promptly
- Attend scheduled pick-up times to receive cords and other regalia

Proper Wearing of Graduation Cords

Wearing graduation cords correctly is important to maintain the decorum and tradition of the commencement ceremony. Iowa State University provides guidelines for how cords should be worn with the cap and gown attire.

Placement and Orientation

Graduation cords are draped around the neck and rest evenly on both shoulders. The ends should hang straight down the front of the gown, ensuring the cords are visible but not tangled.

Combining Multiple Cords

Students who earn multiple cords may wear more than one simultaneously. It is recommended to arrange cords neatly and avoid excessive layering that could detract from the overall appearance.

Additional Regalia Considerations

In addition to cords, graduates may wear stoles, medallions, or pins signifying other honors or affiliations. Coordination with cords is important to maintain a balanced and respectful look throughout the ceremony.

Frequently Asked Questions about Iowa State Graduation Cords

Many students have questions regarding the specifics of Iowa State graduation cords. The following answers address common inquiries to assist graduates in preparation for commencement.

Can students purchase cords if they are not eligible for honors?

Generally, academic honors cords are reserved for students who meet GPA requirements. However, some organizations may sell cords to members regardless of academic standing. It is important to verify the source and eligibility before purchasing.

Are there restrictions on how many cords a student can wear?

There is no official limit on the number of cords worn, but it is advisable to wear only those earned or awarded to avoid confusion or misrepresentation. Excessive cords may also be impractical or uncomfortable during the ceremony.

What should students do if they lose their graduation cords before the ceremony?

Students should contact the appropriate university office or organization as soon as possible to inquire about replacement options. There may be fees or deadlines associated with replacing lost cords.

Do graduation cords differ by college or department within Iowa State?

While many cords are standardized university-wide, some colleges or departments may have unique cords to recognize specific achievements or programs. Students should check with their academic advisors or department offices for details.
