Common Solving Techniques for LA Times Sudoku

Mastering common solving techniques is fundamental to efficiently tackle LA Times Sudoku puzzles, particularly when aiming to solve without immediate reliance on answers. These strategies are widely used by both beginners and advanced players alike.

Scanning and Cross-Hatching

Scanning involves examining rows, columns, and boxes to determine where a particular number can be placed. Cross-hatching is a specific form of scanning used to eliminate possibilities by focusing on the interaction between rows and columns within subgrids.

Candidate Listing and Pencil Marks

Candidate listing refers to noting all possible numbers for each empty cell. Using pencil marks to list candidates helps keep track of potential values and narrows down choices as the puzzle progresses.

Naked and Hidden Singles
