Happiness, in his view, involves a harmonious relationship with the divine, oneself, and the community. This spiritual happiness transcends material possessions and external circumstances, focusing instead on inner peace and fulfillment.

Happiness as a Gift from God

According to Pope Francis, true happiness is a divine gift rather than a human achievement. It comes from openness to God's grace and living in accordance with His will. This perspective highlights the importance of prayer, faith, and sacramental life as foundational for experiencing lasting joy. The pope often stresses that without God, happiness remains incomplete and transient.

Joy in the Beatitudes

The Beatitudes, as presented in the Sermon on the Mount, form a cornerstone of Pope Francis' understanding of happiness.
