The eligibility for Apple Health, premium tax credits, and cost-sharing reductions depends largely on household income relative to the Federal Poverty Level (FPL). Users input their income, family size, and other relevant details to receive personalized results.

Premium Tax Credits

Premium tax credits are subsidies that reduce the monthly cost of qualified health plans. These credits are available to individuals and families with incomes between 100% and 400% of the FPL, helping make insurance more affordable.

Cost-Sharing Reductions

Cost-sharing reductions lower out-of-pocket expenses such as copayments, coinsurance, and deductibles for eligible consumers with incomes between 100% and 250% of the FPL.
